

Travel Anthem is a blog founded by Phindiwe Nkosi, a professional South African travel (and foodie) blogger and writer who's contributed to African and international travel publications, which include, but are not limited to; FlyAfrica.com's inflight magazines, African Travel Market magazines, Heritage magazines (for the North West Parks and Tourism Board) and BizCommunity.com.

Phindiwe Nkosi has a decade of writing experience coupled by postgraduate studies from the University of Pretoria in Culture and Media Studies. She majored in English, Visual Communication and Drama for her undergraduate degree. She also freelances as an international TV news anchor (clients include ABC News 24, Australia and international news agency NewsMode), journalist and marketing and communications consultant. She regularly ghostwrites corporate content, blogs, books and speeches for clients located all over Africa and the world at large.

Rather than only highlighting luxury travel, posh hotels and guesthouses, Travel Anthem explores a lot more to also tell the travel stories that often go unheard. From the highly rated travel destinations to splashing barefoot in water puddles and nibbling on locally caught fresh fish hung on the fence and cooked right there next to the road; there are just so many unexplored travel stories waiting to be told.
